In this course we study how law impacted minorities in the Middle Ages, especially Jews, homosexuals, the disabled and the poor after 1100. We look at how socially disadvantaged persons navigated royal authority even as they were impacted by it. Using secondary sources, literature and legal codes, we reconstruct medieval conceptions of justice from the perspective of marginalized persons in order to ask: what is law?